Young farmer

At the age of four, Gavin Clark knew the names of his neighbour's cows. When he was ten, he started to sell milk and cheese to other neighbours (соседи), and won prizes at farm shows. Now, at thirteen, he still loves farming and has his own animals. Presents for Gavin are not a problem – every year he gets an animal from his parents and brother. Gavin's father, Steven, works for an international company and travels all over the world. Gavin often visits a lot of places in Europe with his father. But he is much happier spending each weekend working on his neighbour's farm! Steven's company wanted him to move to Portugal with the family. Everyone liked the idea of living in a new country – but not Gavin! He said he did not want to leave his animals! In his free time, Gavin plays tennis and football. He goes out with his friends and enjoys computer games like other teenagers. But every morning, he gets up at half past five to give his animals food and water, before he goes to school. His parents want him to go to college and get a diploma when he is sixteen. 'Let's wait and see,' he says, 'because I will have my own farm by then!'

- H. BOOK REVIEW

1. For the first time since 1948, the British capital will host the summer Olympic Games. It was the fourth participation of Britain in the battle to host the games after failed attempts of Birmingham for the 1992 Olympics and Manchester for 1996 and 2000. "I'm looking forward to what I'm sure will be a fantastic Olympic Games," said Prince William.

2. There are many factors, both social and psychological, which influence the roles of teachers and learners in the classroom. The book "Roles of Teachers and Learners" by Tony Wright helps teachers to understand these roles. And the ways in which co-operative learning may best be fostered.

3. It's calculated that Joanne Rowling, the author of very famous books about Harry Potter, is earning $36,000,000 daily and her total profit is already more than $1,000,000,000.

4. In 2005 "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince" broke the previous record of Potter series itself as well as all other records had ever held by freshly published books: more than 8.9 million copies had been sold within 24 hours since the moment of release.

5. The word "hamburger" comes from the name of the German city Hamburg and not from the word "ham", and so the word "cheeseburger", sometimes used to mean a similar kind of sandwich with cheese instead of meat, is based on a false analogy.

6. Reading works of literature gives students an insight into the variety of ways language has been handled over the last three centuries. It is both rewarding and motivating for learners to discover they can understand the language, and that they can even enjoy the experience of reading an English or American classic.

7. The world's famous cycling race comes to its exiting conclusion when the riders cap off three weeks of road racing and 21 stages with a sprint down the Champs Elysees in Paris. The Tour de France will be broadcast live daily at Sport land at 5 p.m. until the last stage on Sunday, June 24.

There is something about the English Channel that has always fascinated the human race and it has always played a special role in British history. The sea itself has always been important to mankind but the Channel often created a barrier between Great Britain and the Continent. This barrier has existed for more than 12,000 years and the desire to break it has occupied the minds of many people for almost two hundred years.

The construction of the tunnel is perhaps the most incredible engineering project of the 20th century. In fact its completion was called a "technical triumph".

However, the first proposal to build a Channel Tunnel appeared in 1802, when a French engineer presented his project for two tunnels to cross it. Historians say Napoleon was interested in that plan. But Napoleon was more interested in fighting the British than in linking the two countries, and shortly afterwards a new war between England and France began. There were many other plans to build a tunnel but unfortunately all of them failed. It was not until after the last war that Britain and France began seriously considering the project. On the 12th February, 1986, Mrs. Thatcher and President Mitterrand signed the Franco-British Treaty which allowed the construction and the operation of the Channel Tunnel. The tunnel was completed eight years later.

It is now very quick and easy to cross the Channel. You don't have to book a ticket. The Channel Tunnel trains operate twenty-four hours a day, every day of the year. You can now cross the Channel in thirty-five minutes. At last the great barrier has been broken.

In 1996, the American Society of Civil Engineers, with Popular Mechanics, selected the tunnel as one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World.

Dear Tom? Thanks for your letter. It was great to hear from you. How are you keeping? I hope you are fine. As for me, I live in a small town. Each person in our town are very friendly and talkative. So I enjoy to live here. There are not so many places of entertainment in our town. Usually my spare time I spend walking with my friends or going to a park. It is imposible to accurstely predict the weather in Russia in a year, but usually we have 20-25 degrees in June and July. Sorry, I have got to go now. It is time for my favourite TV show.

There is something about the English Channel that has always fascinated the human race and it has always played a special role in British history. The sea itself has always been important to mankind but the Channel often created a barrier between Great Britain and the Continent. This barrier has existed for more than 12,000 years and the desire to break it has occupied the minds of many people for almost two hundred years.

The construction of the tunnel is perhaps the most incredible engineering project of the 20th century. In fact its completion was called a "technical triumph".

However, the first proposal to build a Channel Tunnel appeared in 1802, when a French engineer presented his project for two tunnels to cross it. Historians say Napoleon was interested in that plan. But Napoleon was more interested in fighting the British than in linking the two countries, and shortly afterwards a new war between England and France began. There were many other plans to build a tunnel but unfortunately all of them failed. It was not until after the last war that Britain and France began seriously considering the project. On the 12th February, 1986, Mrs. Thatcher and President Mitterrand signed the Franco-British Treaty which allowed the construction and the operation of the Channel Tunnel. The tunnel was completed eight years later.

It is now very quick and easy to cross the Channel. You don't have to book a ticket. The Channel Tunnel trains operate twenty-four hours a day, every day of the year. You can now cross the Channel in thirty-five minutes. At last the great barrier has been broken.

In 1996, the American Society of Civil Engineers, with Popular Mechanics, selected the tunnel as one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World.

There is something about the English Channel that has always fascinated the human race and it has always played a special role in British history. The sea itself has always been important to mankind but the Channel often created a barrier between Great Britain and the Continent. This barrier has existed for more than 12,000 years and the desire to break it has occupied the minds of many people for almost two hundred years.

The construction of the tunnel is perhaps the most incredible engineering project of the 20th century. In fact its completion was called a "technical triumph".

However, the first proposal to build a Channel Tunnel appeared in 1802, when a French engineer presented his project for two tunnels to cross it. Historians say Napoleon was interested in that plan. Pitcher, a confidential clerk in the office of Harvey Maxwell, allowed a look of mild interest and surprise when his employer briskly entered at half-past nine in company with a young lady. Miss Leslie had been Maxwell's stenographer for a year. She was beautiful in a way that was decidedly unstenographic. On this morning she was softly and shyly radiant. Her eyes were dreamily bright, her expression a happy one, tinged with reminiscence. Pitcher, still mildly curious, noticed a difference in her ways this morning. Instead of going straight into the adjoining room, where her desk was, she stayed for a while, slightly irresolute, in the outer office. Once she moved over by Maxwell's desk near enough for him to be aware of her presence. The man sitting at that desk was no longer a man; it was a machine, moved by buzzing wheels and uncoiling springs.

"Well – what is it? Anything?" asked Maxwell sharply.

"Nothing," answered the stenographer, moving away with a little smile.

This day was Harvey Maxwell's busy day. Messenger boys ran in and out with messages and telegrams. Maxwell himself jumped from desk to door sweating. On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes, and those powerful disturbances were reproduced in miniature in Maxwell's office. The rush and pace of business grew faster and fiercer. Share prices were falling and orders to sell them were coming and going and the man was working like some strong machine. Here was a world of finance, and there was no room in it for the human world or the world of nature.

When the luncheon hour came, Maxwell stood by his desk with a fountain pen over his right ear. His window was open. And through the window came a delicate, sweet smell of lilac that fixed the broker for a moment immovable. For this odour belonged to Miss Leslie; it was her own, and hers only. She was in the next room – twenty steps away.

"By George, I'll do it now," said Maxwell half aloud. "I'll ask her now. I wonder why I didn't do it long ago." He dashed into the inner office and charged upon the desk of the stenographer. She looked at him with a smile.

"Miss Leslie," he began hurriedly, "I have but a moment to spare. I want to say something in that moment. Will you be my wife? I haven't had time to approach you in the ordinary way, but I really do love you."

"Oh, what are you talking about?" exclaimed the young lady. She rose to her feet and gazed upon him, round-eyed.

"Don't you understand?" said Maxwell. "I want you to marry me. I love you, Miss Leslie. I wanted to tell you, and I snatched a minute. They are calling me for the phone now. Tell them to wait a minute, Pitcher. Won't you, Miss Leslie?"

The stenographer acted very strangely. She seemed overcome with amazement; then tears flowed from her wondering eyes; and then she smiled sunnily through them.

"I know now," she said softly. "It is this old business that has driven everything else out of your head for the time. I was frightened at first. Don't you remember, Harvey? We were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the Little Church Around the Corner."

1. Harvey Maxwell was

9002 Distance learning is the best form of education.

In my opinion, distance learning is the best form of education, because it is comfortable for me. But full-time learning is nice too.

I like distance learning, because it is free and no money to ^{for} studying, it is some online schools and universities. And distance learning is good, because it's comfortable and you can study and learn some courses at home. There aren't special form for education. And the last reason is programmes in online schools are very important and beautiful. There are a lot of exercises and interesting tasks. Teacher in such schools are qualified and professional. They love their work.

But some of people don't like distance education, and I think there are some reasons. For example, sometimes education by phones and computers is difficult, especially for elder people and they (are some) like education full-time for the best understanding. And the second reason is payment in such schools. In some schools such education is very expensive, but the learning isn't professional.

I think, that there are a lot of schools, where are no money for education, but the education is wonderful. And I like online and distance learning

9003 Distance learning is the best form of education.
Distance learning is when a child doesn't go to school, but studies at home. There are of course advantages of such learning - you can get concentrated on what you read and study. You have as much time as you need to understand the material. But on the other hand school is not only (study) about studying. It's about communication with other people, getting friends.

I think that the biggest disadvantages of distance learning is the lack of social interaction with other students and teachers. Distance learning is often a solitary experience, which can be a disadvantage for student who benefit from face-to-face, interactions. And I think that distance learning is a bad decision for a child. Probably, taking myself as an example, I could not study like this for a long time. In my opinion, traditional classroom courses are more efficient. You may ask the teacher as many questions as you want, and you'll get detailed replies.

Pitcher, a confidential clerk in the office of Harvey Maxwell, allowed a look of mild interest and surprise when his employer briskly entered at half-past nine in company with a young lady. Miss Leslie had been Maxwell's stenographer for a year. She was beautiful in a way that was decidedly unstenographic. On this morning she was softly and shyly radiant. Her eyes were dreamily bright, her expression a happy one, tinged with reminiscence. Pitcher, still mildly curious, noticed a difference in her ways this morning. Instead of going straight into the adjoining room, where her desk was, she stayed for a while, slightly irresolute, in the outer office. Once she moved over by Maxwell's desk near enough for him to be aware of her presence. The man sitting at that desk was no longer a man; it was a machine, moved by buzzing wheels and uncoiling springs.

"Well – what is it? Anything?" asked Maxwell sharply.

"Nothing," answered the stenographer, moving away with a little smile.

This day was Harvey Maxwell's busy day. Messenger boys ran in and out with messages and telegrams. Maxwell himself jumped from desk to door sweating. On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes, and those powerful disturbances were reproduced in miniature in Maxwell's office. The rush and pace of business grew faster and fiercer. Share prices were falling and orders to sell them were coming and going and the man was working like some strong machine. Here was a world of finance, and there was no room in it for the human world or the world of nature.

When the luncheon hour came, Maxwell stood by his desk with a fountain pen over his right ear. His window was open. And through the window came a delicate, sweet smell of lilac that fixed the broker for a moment immovable. For this odour belonged to Miss Leslie; it was her own, and hers only. She was in the next room – twenty steps away.

"By George, I'll do it now," said Maxwell half aloud. "I'll ask her now. I wonder why I didn't do it long ago." He dashed into the inner office and charged upon the desk of the stenographer. She looked at him with a smile.

"Miss Leslie," he began hurriedly, "I have but a moment to spare. I want to say something in that moment. Will you be my wife? I haven't had time to approach you in the ordinary way, but I really do love you."

"Oh, what are you talking about?" exclaimed the young lady. She rose to her feet and gazed upon him, round-eyed.

"Don't you understand?" said Maxwell. "I want you to marry me. I love you, Miss Leslie. I wanted to tell you, and I snatched a minute. They are calling me for the phone now. Tell them to wait a minute, Pitcher. Won't you, Miss Leslie?"

The stenographer acted very strangely. She seemed overcome with amazement; then tears flowed from her wondering eyes; and then she smiled sunnily through them.

"I know now," she said softly. "It is this old business that has driven everything else out of your head for the time. I was frightened at first. Don't you remember, Harvey? We were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the Little Church Around the Corner."

 - A) a stenographer.

 - A) Miss Leslie moved decidedly to Maxwell's desk.

- B) the financial situation was difficult.

- D) those were powerful disturbances of nature.

5. Maxwell dashed into the inner office at lunch time because
- A) the smell reminded him of Miss Leslie.
 - B) he liked the lilac smell.

Distant learning is when a child doesn't go to school, but studies at home on his own or with the help of a tutor. It may be because of his health, or because of his family travels a lot or for some other reasons. There are of course advantages of such learning - you can get concentrated on what you read and study, you have as much time as you need to understand the material. But on the other hand school is not only about studying, it's about communication with other people, it's finding your place in the society, getting friends, learning how to behave and so on. So I think that if it is possible a child should go to school.

Distant education also has another meaning. When we go to university or want to start some advanced courses there is an option to have distant learning is that you can study in another country without leaving your own one. It gives you more freedom in your schedule - you don't have to attend lessons, so one can combine studying and working. Distant learning gives you a chance to have a certificate in any field that you like and choose education you want.

So I suppose sometimes distant learning can be a good option, but of course what is better for him

Nowadays some people think that studying online is the best way to get an education. Others do not agree with that point of view.

To my mind, distance learning is the best form of education. The first, it is convenient. Secondly, you save your money. Distant education gives us an opportunity to gain knowledge wherever we want. It is a good chance for people who want to get education in a foreign country but don't want to leave ~~their~~ home or just cannot do it.

Many people believe that distance learning is the best. However, many others think that studying ~~at~~ school is better than of view, it is the best. Firstly, it is more convenient - you don't need to wear a school uniform, you can take a break anytime, etc. You can stay alone without classmates and teacher, and you can relax and concentrate better.

Others think that studying at home is worse than studying at school. Their argument is that attending school is the main way for a teenager to socialize. I don't agree with them. There are many ways to socialize. You may go to different clubs and dancing classes, meet teenagers who share your interests.

Some people say that quality of distant learning is really low, because when we are at home, we are not much concentrated and we are too relaxed. I disagree with this statement. I think that it is easier to analyze information and to learn something when you are relaxed and there is nothing disturbing you.

To sum up, I would like to say that distant learning has a huge number of advantages and it gives us many possibilities.

Pitcher, a confidential clerk in the office of Harvey Maxwell, allowed a look of mild interest and surprise when his employer briskly entered at half-past nine in company with a young lady. Miss Leslie had been Maxwell's stenographer for a year. She was beautiful in a way that was decidedly unstenographic. On this morning she was softly and shyly radiant. Her eyes were dreamily bright, her expression a happy one, tinged with reminiscence. Pitcher, still mildly curious, noticed a difference in her ways this morning. Instead of going straight into the adjoining room, where her desk was, she stayed for a while, slightly irresolute, in the outer office. Once she moved over by Maxwell's desk near enough for him to be aware of her presence.

The man sitting at that desk was no longer a man; it was a machine, moved by buzzing wheels and uncoiling springs.

"Well – what is it? Anything?" asked Maxwell sharply.

"Nothing," answered the stenographer, moving away with a little smile.

This day was Harvey Maxwell's busy day. Messenger boys ran in and out with messages and telegrams. Maxwell himself jumped from desk to desk sweating. On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes, and those powerful disturbances were reproduced in miniature in Maxwell's office. The rush and pace of business grew faster and fiercer. Share prices were falling and orders to sell them were coming and going and the man was working like some strong machine. Here was a world of finance, and there was no room in it for the human world or the world of nature.

When the luncheon hour came, Maxwell stood by his desk with a fountain pen over his right ear. His window was open. And through the window came a delicate, sweet smell of lilac that fixed the broker for a moment immovable. For this odour belonged to Miss Leslie; it was her own, and hers only. She was in the next room – twenty steps away.

"By George, I'll do it now," said Maxwell half aloud. "I'll ask her now. I wonder why I didn't do it long ago." He dashed into the inner office and charged upon the desk of the stenographer. She looked at him with a smile.

"Miss Leslie," he began hurriedly, "I have but a moment to spare. I want to say something in that moment. Will you be my wife? I haven't had time to approach you in the ordinary way, but I really do love you."

"Oh, what are you talking about?" exclaimed the young lady. She rose to her feet and gazed upon him, round-eyed.

"Don't you understand?" said Maxwell. "I want you to marry me. I love you, Miss Leslie. I wanted to tell you, and I snatched a minute. They are calling me for the phone now. Tell them to wait a minute, Pitcher. Won't you, Miss Leslie?"

The stenographer acted very strangely. She seemed overcome with amazement; then tears flowed from her wondering eyes; and then she smiled sunnily through them.

"I know now," she said softly. "It is this old business that has driven everything else out of your head for the time. I was frightened at first. Don't you remember, Harvey? We were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the Little Church Around the Corner."

1. Harvey Maxwell was

- A) a stenographer.
- B) a clerk.

- A) he had no one to help him.
- B) the Exchange was a busy place.

- A) the Exchange was about to be destroyed.
- B) the financial situation was difficult.

5. Maxwell dashed into the inner office at lunch time because

- A) the smell reminded him of Miss Leslie.

Distance learning is the best form of education

Education is very important nowadays. We want to have a prestigious job in future, nice salary, good career. That's why after school we try to attend university.

It's not easy to go to work and study at the same time. That's why today there are many possibilities to study at home. What is more you can do it any comfortable time for you.

I would like to try distance learning. Basically you can have a schedule when you have to pass all the exams and tests. Rest time is all yours. I am sure that distance learning is the best form of education. You can attend any course you like from any university. If you live in a small town and you have no possibility to go in a bigger city. Distance learning is an excellent option for you.

But there are also minuses in distance learning. Unfortunately for some people it's difficult to organize their day. When you don't have to study regularly it's not easy to start. So some of us need a strict schedule to study every day. Distance learning gives you freedom to choose how to study and when to study. Also some organizations don't recognize the certificate that we get after distance learning. But I think that our knowledge is much more important for an employer.

In general distance education is very useful. Many students found good jobs after these courses and today they feel happy

Distance learning is the best form of education.

To my mind, distance learning is the best form of education. Firstly, it is convenient. You have comfortable conditions for studying at home. Secondly, you save a lot of money on transport fare.

However, there are a lot of people who think that online education is not the best. They think that people who study at home live a sedentary lifestyle. I can not agree with them because you can do sports or go outside when you have free time between lessons.

To sum up, I would like to say that it is the best way to get an education online. It saves your money, time and gives you more freedom.
