Young farmer

At the age of four, Gavin Clark knew the names of his neighbour's cows. When he was ten, he started to sell milk and cheese to other neighbours (соседи), and won prizes at farm shows. Now, at thirteen, he still loves farming and has his own animals. Presents for Gavin are not a problem – every year he gets an animal from his parents and brother. Gavin's father, Steven, works for an international company and travels all over the world. Gavin often visits a lot of places in Europe with his father. But he is much happier spending each weekend working on his neighbour's farm! Steven's company wanted him to move to Portugal with the family. Everyone liked the idea of living in a new country – but not Gavin! He said he did not want to leave his animals! In his free time, Gavin plays tennis and football. He goes out with his friends and enjoys computer games like other teenagers. But every morning, he gets up at half past five to give his animals food and water, before he goes to school. His parents want him to go to college and get a diploma when he is sixteen. 'Let's wait and see,' he says, 'because I will have my own farm by then!'

There is something about the English Channel that has always fascinated the human race and it has always played a special role in British history. The sea itself has always been important to mankind but the Channel often created a barrier between Great Britain and the Continent. This barrier has existed for more than 12,000 years and the desire to break it has occupied the minds of many people for almost two hundred years.

The construction of the tunnel is perhaps the most incredible engineering project of the 20th century. In fact its completion was called a "technical triumph".

However, the first proposal to build a Channel Tunnel appeared in 1802, when a French engineer presented his project for two tunnels to cross it. Historians say Napoleon was interested in that plan. But Napoleon was more interested in fighting the British than in linking the two countries, and shortly afterwards a new war between England and France began. There were many other plans to build a tunnel but unfortunately all of them failed. It was not until after the last war that Britain and France began seriously considering the project. On the 12th February, 1986, Mrs. Thatcher and President Mitterrand signed the Franco-British Treaty which allowed the construction and the operation of the Channel Tunnel, The tunnel was completed eight years later.

It is now very quick and easy to cross the Channel. You don't have to book a ticket. The Channel Tunnel trains operate twenty-four hours a day, every day of the year. You can now cross the Channel in thirty-five minutes. At last the great barrier has been broken.

In 1996, the American Society of Civil Engineers, with Popular Mechanics, selected the tunnel as one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World.

1. What has always been important to all people?
a. The English Channel.
b. The sea.
c. The tunnel.

2. What did Europeans want to do for many years?
a. To create a barrier between Great Britain and the Continent.

Hi, Tom Green

I received your letter, thank you for your letter, I was nice to receive a letter from you. I really like this small town. The streets are spacious and not overly crowded with people. Town is so beautiful, cozy and atmospheric. In my free time, I enjoy walking through the streets and the parks. Sometimes I run into friends and play basket ball with them.

Sorry, I have go now. I'm looking forwart to your letter.

See you soon

There is something about the English Channel that has always fascinated the human race and it has always played a special role in British history. The sea itself has always been important to mankind but the Channel often created a barrier between Great Britain and the Continent. This barrier has existed for more than 12,000 years and the desire to break it has occupied the minds of many people for almost two hundred years.

The construction of the tunnel is perhaps the most incredible engineering project of the 20th century. In fact its completion was called a "technical triumph".

However, the first proposal to build a Channel Tunnel appeared in 1802, when a French engineer presented his project for two tunnels to cross it. Historians say Napoleon was interested in that plan. But Napoleon was more interested in fighting the British than in linking the two countries, and shortly afterwards a new war between England and France began. There were many other plans to build a tunnel but unfortunately all of them failed. It was not until after the last war that Britain and France began seriously considering the project. On the 12th February, 1986, Mrs. Thatcher and President Mitterrand signed the Franco-British Treaty which allowed the construction and the operation of the Channel Tunnel. The tunnel was completed eight years later.

It is now very quick and easy to cross the Channel. You don't have to book a ticket. The Channel Tunnel trains operate twenty-four hours a day, every day of the year. You can now cross the Channel in thirty-five minutes. At last the great barrier has been broken.

In 1996, the American Society of Civil Engineers, with Popular Mechanics, selected the tunnel as one of the Seven Wonders of the Modern World.

Раздел 3 (Письмо)

Ты получил письмо от своего друга из Англии по имени Tom Green, который пишет...

... I live in Manchester. I like my city very much but sometimes the people here are not very friendly and they don't try to keep our city clean and beautiful. And do you enjoy living in a small town? How do you spend your spare time there?
Anyway, I'm thinking of travelling to Russia next summer. Could you tell me what weather to expect?

Напиши ему ответ, согласно правилам написания письма другу.
Объем высказывания 80-100 слов.

Hi, Tom Green

I received your letter, thank you for your letter. In your letter, you ask me if I like living in a small town? Yes, I do.

It's calm and quiet here. And the streets here are not crowded. My spare time I like to spend in the park, I also meet with my friends and we play football.

The weather will be fine next (week) summer.

Sorry, I have to go now. I am looking forward to your letter.

Your friend, Zarim.

Pitcher, a confidential clerk in the office of Harvey Maxwell, allowed a look of mild interest and surprise when his employer briskly entered at half-past nine in company with a young lady. Miss Leslie had been Maxwell's stenographer for a year. She was beautiful in a way that was decidedly unstenographic. On this morning she was softly and shyly radiant. Her eyes were dreamily bright, her expression a happy one, tinged with reminiscence. Pitcher, still mildly curious, noticed a difference in her ways this morning. Instead of going straight into the adjoining room, where her desk was, she stayed for a while, slightly irresolute, in the outer office. Once she moved over by Maxwell's desk near enough for him to be aware of her presence.

The man sitting at that desk was no longer a man; it was a machine, moved by buzzing wheels and uncoiling springs.

"Well – what is it? Anything?" asked Maxwell sharply.

"Nothing," answered the stenographer, moving away with a little smile.

This day was Harvey Maxwell's busy day. Messenger boys ran in and out with messages and telegrams. Maxwell himself jumped from desk to door sweating. On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes, and those powerful disturbances were reproduced in miniature in Maxwell's office. The rush and pace of business grew faster and fiercer. Share prices were falling and orders to sell them were coming and going and the man was working like some strong machine. Here was a world of finance, and there was no room in it for the human world or the world of nature.

When the luncheon hour came, Maxwell stood by his desk with a fountain pen over his right ear. His window was open. And through the window came a delicate, sweet smell of lilac that fixed the broker for a moment immovable. For this odour belonged to Miss Leslie; it was her own, and hers only. She was in the next room – twenty steps away.

"By George, I'll do it now," said Maxwell half aloud. " I'll ask her now. I wonder why I didn't do it long ago." He dashed into the inner office and charged upon the desk of the stenographer. She looked at him with a smile.

"Miss Leslie," he began hurriedly, "I have but a moment to spare. I want to say something in that moment. Will you be my wife? I haven't had time to approach you in the ordinary way, but I really do love you."

"Oh, what are you talking about?" exclaimed the young lady. She rose to her feet and gazed upon him, round-eyed.

"Don't you understand?" said Maxwell. "I want you to marry me. I love you, Miss Leslie. I wanted to tell you, and I snatched a minute. They are calling me for the phone now. Tell them to wait a minute, Pitcher. Won't you, Miss Leslie?"

The stenographer acted very strangely. She seemed overcome with amazement; then tears flowed from her wondering eyes; and then she smiled sunnily through them.

"I know now," she said softly. "It is this old business that has driven everything else out of your head for the time. I was frightened at first. Don't you remember, Harvey? We were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the Little Church Around the Corner."

Distance learning is the best form of education.

Nowadays the question of whether distance learning it the best form of education is widely bedated. While some people believe it is the ultimate solution, others argue that traditional classroom learning is superior.

Personally, I believe that distance learning is an excellent alternative but it is not necessarily the absolute best for everyone. Firstly, it offers unparalleled flexibility. Students can study at their own pace and shedule, which is perfect for those who work or have other commitments. Secondly, it provides access to education for people who lived in remote areas or have disabilities, making knowledge more accessible.

However, there is an opposing opinion. Many argue that traditional education is better because it provides face-to-face interaction with teachers and peers. This social aspect is crucial for developing communication skills and receiving immediate feedback, which can be difficult to achieve online. I disagree with this opposing opinion because modern technology has significantly improved online interaction. Video calls, forums, and virtual group projects allow students to collaborate and communicate effectively. While the social aspect is different, it still exists and can even be more focused.

In conclusion, while distance learning may not be the single best form of education for everyone, it is a highly effective and flexible method that suits many modern learners. Is should be seen as a valuable complement to, rather than a complete replacement for, traditional education.

Personally, I believe that distance learning is an excellent alternative, but it is not necessarily the absolute best for everyone. Firstly, it offers unparalleled flexibility. Student can study at their own pace and schedule, which is perfect for those who work or have other commitments. Secondly, it provides access to education for people who live in remote areas or have disabilities, making knowledge more accessible.

However, there is an opposing opinion. Many argue that traditional education is better because it provides face-to-face interaction with teachers and peers. This social aspect is crucial for developing communication skills and receiving immediate feedback, which can be difficult to achieve online.

I disagree because modern technology has significantly improved online interaction. Video calls and virtual projects allow students to collaborate effectively, so the social aspect still exists, even if it differs.

In conclusion, distance learning may not suit everyone, but it is a flexible and effective method. It should complement, not replace, traditional education.

Pitcher, a confidential clerk in the office of Harvey Maxwell, allowed a look of mild interest and surprise when his employer briskly entered at half-past nine in company with a young lady. Miss Leslie had been Maxwell's stenographer for a year. She was beautiful in a way that was decidedly unstenographic. On this morning she was softly and shyly radiant. Her eyes were dreamily bright, her expression a happy one, tinged with reminiscence. Pitcher, still mildly curious, noticed a difference in her ways this morning. Instead of going straight into the adjoining room, where her desk was, she stayed for a while, slightly irresolute, in the outer office. Once she moved over by Maxwell's desk near enough for him to be aware of her presence.

The man sitting at that desk was no longer a man; it was a machine, moved by buzzing wheels and uncoiling springs.

"Well – what is it? Anything?" asked Maxwell sharply.

"Nothing," answered the stenographer, moving away with a little smile.

This day was Harvey Maxwell's busy day. Messenger boys ran in and out with messages and telegrams. Maxwell himself jumped from desk to door sweating. On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes, and those powerful disturbances were reproduced in miniature in Maxwell's office. The rush and pace of business grew faster and fiercer. Share prices were falling and orders to sell them were coming and going and the man was working like some strong machine. Here was a world of finance, and there was no room in it for the human world or the world of nature.

When the luncheon hour came, Maxwell stood by his desk with a fountain pen over his right ear. His window was open. And through the window came a delicate, sweet smell of lilac that fixed the broker for a moment immovable. For this odour belonged to Miss Leslie; it was her own, and hers only. She was in the next room – twenty steps away.

"By George, I'll do it now," said Maxwell half aloud. " I'll ask her now. I wonder why I didn't do it long ago." He dashed into the inner office and charged upon the desk of the stenographer. She looked at him with a smile.

"Miss Leslie," he began hurriedly, "I have but a moment to spare. I want to say something in that moment. Will you be my wife? I haven't had time to approach you in the ordinary way, but I really do love you."

"Oh, what are you talking about?" exclaimed the young lady. She rose to her feet and gazed upon him, round-eyed.

"Don't you understand?" said Maxwell. "I want you to marry me. I love you, Miss Leslie. I wanted to tell you, and I snatched a minute. They are calling me for the phone now. Tell them to wait a minute, Pitcher. Won't you, Miss Leslie?"

The stenographer acted very strangely. She seemed overcome with amazement; then tears flowed from her wondering eyes; and then she smiled sunnily through them.

"I know now," she said softly. "It is this old business that has driven everything else out of your head for the time. I was frightened at first. Don't you remember, Harvey? We were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the Little Church Around the Corner."

1. Harvey Maxwell was
A) a stenographer.
B) a clerk.
C) Pitcher's boss.
D) Pitcher's partner.

2. Pitcher was mildly interested and surprised because
A) Miss Leslie moved decidedly to Maxwell's desk.
B) Maxwell came late at half past ten.
C) Miss Leslie arrived with Maxwell.
D) Maxwell looked irresolute that morning.

3. It was Harvey Maxwell's hard day because
A) he had no one to help him.
B) the Exchange was a busy place.
C) the weather was hot.
D) all messenger boys had gone.

4. 'On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes' means
A) the Exchange was about to be destroyed.
B) the financial situation was difficult.
C) natural disasters often happened in that area.
D) those were powerful disturbances of nature.

5. Maxwell dashed into the inner office at lunch time because
A) the smell reminded him of Miss Leslie.
B) he liked the lilac smell.
C) Pitcher called him for a phone call.
D) he needed to send a message.

6. Harvey Maxwell made a proposal between phone calls because he
A) was rather pressed for time.
B) used to make business proposals in such a way.
C) always acted very strangely.
D) was afraid Miss Leslie would leave him.

7. Miss Leslie was astonished by the proposal because
A) she had never heard anyone make it in such a way.
B) she had never expected it from Harvey Maxwell.
C) it came too quickly and without warning.
D) she had married the man the day before.

Distance learning is the best form of education.

The question of whether distance learning is the best form of education is highly debated. While it offers undeniable conveniences, it also has significant drawbacks that traditional classroom learning adresses more effectively.

On the one hand, distance learning provides several advantages. It saves time by eliminating the need to commute, and it allows students to learn at their own pace in a comfortable environment. This format is especially beneficial for individuals with physical disabilities, those who live in remote areas, or anyone who prefers flexibility. Additionally, it has proven to be an effective solution during emergencies, such as the COVID-19 pandemic, when schools and universities were closed.

On the other hand, critics argue that online learning lacks essential elements of a traditional education. The absence of face-to-face interaction can lead to a lack of social skills and a sense of community. There is also the issue of technical failures, which can disrupt lessons and cause frustration. Moreover, the lack of immediate feedback from a teacher can make it difficult to identify and correct misunderstandings.

In conclusion, while distance learning has many benefits, it cannot be considered the best form of education for everyone. Traditional classroom learning offers invaluable opportunities for socialization, hands-on experience, and immediate teacher feedback. The ideal approach may be a combination of both methods, leveraging the strengths of each to create a well-rounded education.

In recent years, distance learning has become increasingly popular around the around the world. Some people still prefer traditional classroom education, but I strongly belive that distance learning is the best fourm of education today. It offers flexibility, accessibility, and a wid variety of learning opportunities.

Firstly, distance learning provides flexibility for students of all ages. People can study at their own pace and choose the most convenient time and place to learn. For example, working adults or parents with children can combine education with their daily responsibilities. This is especially helpful for those who cannot attend regular classes because of work or family obligations.

Secondly, online education is more accessible than traditional schooling. It removes geographical barriers and allows students from remote areas to learn from the best teachers and institutions in the world. For instance, a student living in a small village can attend lectures from a top university without leaving their home. All they need is a computer and internet acces.

Thirdly, distance learning offers a wide range of courses and formats. Learners can choose video lessons, interactive tasks, live sessions, or even group projects online. This variety helps students find the method that suits them best, making the educational process more personalized and engaging.

Some critics argue that distance learning lacks live communication and discipline. While it is true that online education (and discipline. W) requires more self-motivation, many platforms include interactive elements such as forums, chats, and video calls. In fact, these tools often encourage shy students to participate more actively than they would in a traditional classroom.

In conclusion, distance learning is the best form of education in today's fast-changing world. It is flexible, widely accessible, and offers endless learning opportunities for everyone. As technology continues to improve, online education will only become more effective and important.

Pitcher, a confidential clerk in the office of Harvey Maxwell, allowed a look of mild interest and surprise when his employer briskly entered at half-past nine in company with a young lady. Miss Leslie had been Maxwell's stenographer for a year. She was beautiful in a way that was decidedly unstenographic. On this morning she was softly and shyly radiant. Her eyes were dreamily bright, her expression a happy one, tinged with reminiscence. Pitcher, still mildly curious, noticed a difference in her ways this morning. Instead of going straight into the adjoining room, where her desk was, she stayed for a while, slightly irresolute, in the outer office. Once she moved over by Maxwell's desk near enough for him to be aware of her presence.

The man sitting at that desk was no longer a man; it was a machine, moved by buzzing wheels and uncoiling springs.

"Well – what is it? Anything?" asked Maxwell sharply.

"Nothing," answered the stenographer, moving away with a little smile.

This day was Harvey Maxwell's busy day. Messenger boys ran in and out with messages and telegrams. Maxwell himself jumped from desk to door sweating. On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes, and those powerful disturbances were reproduced in miniature in Maxwell's office. The rush and pace of business grew faster and fiercer. Share prices were falling and orders to sell them were coming and going and the man was working like some strong machine. Here was a world of finance, and there was no room in it for the human world or the world of nature.

When the luncheon hour came, Maxwell stood by his desk with a fountain pen over his right ear. His window was open. And through the window came a delicate, sweet smell of lilac that fixed the broker for a moment immovable. For this odour belonged to Miss Leslie; it was her own, and hers only. She was in the next room – twenty steps away.

"By George, I'll do it now," said Maxwell half aloud. " I'll ask her now. I wonder why I didn't do it long ago." He dashed into the inner office and charged upon the desk of the stenographer. She looked at him with a smile.

"Miss Leslie," he began hurriedly, "I have but a moment to spare. I want to say something in that moment. Will you be my wife? I haven't had time to approach you in the ordinary way, but I really do love you."

"Oh, what are you talking about?" exclaimed the young lady. She rose to her feet and gazed upon him, round-eyed.

"Don't you understand?" said Maxwell. "I want you to marry me. I love you, Miss Leslie. I wanted to tell you, and I snatched a minute. They are calling me for the phone now. Tell them to wait a minute, Pitcher. Won't you, Miss Leslie?"

The stenographer acted very strangely. She seemed overcome with amazement; then tears flowed from her wondering eyes; and then she smiled sunnily through them.

"I know now," she said softly. "It is this old business that has driven everything else out of your head for the time. I was frightened at first. Don't you remember, Harvey? We were married last evening at 8 o'clock in the Little Church Around the Corner."

1. Harvey Maxwell was
A) a stenographer.
B) a clerk.
C) Pitcher's boss.
D) Pitcher's partner.

2. Pitcher was mildly interested and surprised because
A) Miss Leslie moved decidedly to Maxwell's desk.
B) Maxwell came late at half past ten.
C) Miss Leslie arrived with Maxwell.
D) Maxwell looked irresolute that morning.

3. It was Harvey Maxwell's hard day because
A) he had no one to help him.
B) the Exchange was a busy place.
C) the weather was hot.
D) all messenger boys had gone.

4. 'On the Exchange there were hurricanes and snowstorms and volcanoes' means
A) the Exchange was about to be destroyed.
B) the financial situation was difficult.
C) natural disasters often happened in that area.
D) those were powerful disturbances of nature.

5. Maxwell dashed into the inner office at lunch time because
A) the smell reminded him of Miss Leslie.
B) he liked the lilac smell.
C) Pitcher called him for a phone call.
D) he needed to send a message.

6. Harvey Maxwell made a proposal between phone calls because he
A) was rather pressed for time.
B) used to make business proposals in such a way.
C) always acted very strangely.
D) was afraid Miss Leslie would leave him.

7. Miss Leslie was astonished by the proposal because
A) she had never heard anyone make it in such a way.
B) she had never expected it from Harvey Maxwell.
C) it came too quickly and without warning.
D) she had married the man the day before.

Distance Learning is the best form of Education.

In today's fast-paced digital world education is undergoing a massive transformation. With the rapid development of technology, online learning has become increasingly popular. While some people prefer traditional classroom, I strongly believe that distance learning is the best form of education because of its flexibility, accessibility, and modern approach.

First of all, distance learning offers unmatched flexibility. Student's can study from anywhere in the world and manage their own time. There is no need to spend hours commuting to school or university every day, which saves a lot of energy and money. Furthermore, online platforms provide a wide range of interactive tools, recorded lectures, and digital libraries that make learning more personalized and efficient.

On the other hand, critics argue that online education lacks face-to-face communication and socialization, which are vital for personal development. Some student also find it hard to stay self-disciplined without a teacher standing right in front of them. However, these issues can be easily solved. Modern video calls, chat rooms, and group projects help student stay connected, while time-management skills are simply a great bonus that online learning teaches us to develop.

To sum up, distance learning is the most convenient and adaptable way to gain knowledge in the 21th century. It gives students freedom, saves precious time, and prepares them for a digital future. Therefore, I am convinced that distance learning is truly the best form of education.

Distance learning is the best form of education.

Nowadays, distance learning is becoming more popular. Some people believe that studying online is the best way to get an education, while some of them prefer traditional way of education. In my opinion, distance learning has many advantages. Also, it is good because it can replace studying at school or university.

Firstly, online education help to save a lot of time. Students do not need to travel and spend time on (walking) going to the schools or universities, so they can spend more valueable time at home. Also, when students do not understand (som) any information, they can search it on Internet and do not skip any knowledge. (Moreover)

As for traditional classes, some people think that it is more effective than distance learning. That is so because they can commenicate with each other and check their knowledge. Also, at schools or universities students can concentrate more than at home.

I do not agree with this opinion because nowadays modern technologies allow students to manage their time and become more independent. Also, they can improve their knowledge by asking and getting more information about anything.

In conclusion, I believe that distance learning is the best form of edecation because it is very convenient and it requires such useful skills such as self-discipline and time-management. 125.
